KATIE knows the SHORE

Katie is Shore through and through. She grew up in Trappe, went to school in Cambridge, and is raising her daughter here. She knows rent, mortgages, and health care keep climbing faster than paychecks. For twenty years, she's helped Shore communities turn local priorities into funded projects. In the State Senate, she'll bring down housing and health care costs, strengthen our schools, and bring good-paying jobs home.

KATIE CLENDANIEL

STATE SENATE DISTRICT 37

GOOD for the SHORE

Katie knows what it's like to sit at the kitchen table and choose between the power bill and groceries. No Shore family should have to make that choice.

In the State Senate, Katie will fight to lower your utility bills by making big data centers and powerful corporations pay the full cost of the electricity and grid upgrades they need, instead of passing those costs onto you. She'll work to support our schools and bring more doctors closer to home.

Katie has already helped secure more than $9 million for projects and programs here on the Shore. In Annapolis, she brought home funding for local priorities, worked to address the housing shortage, and helped create a new fund to support downtown Main Street organizations and small businesses.

That's how Katie leads: bringing people together, solving problems, and delivering results for the Shore, not playing partisan games.

Data centers should pay for the power they use, not you. But Johnny Mautz voted in 2026 against making them responsible for their own energy use. And he's consistently voted against education funding for our schools and teachers.[1]
